Roots as Feed for Cattle.

The Russian River Flag of the 7th instant contains the following: Every close observer of the agricultural methods of the East, and especially of England and other foreign countries, will have been surprised to find farmers on this coast generally rather prejudiced against root crops, and will wonder why this should be so. The fact that our climate enables us to pasture during a considerable portion of the year is undoubtedly one of the causes. To this may be added the growing favor of alfalfa as a feed, and perhaps also the fact that many of our farmers came from the Western States where corn is a great desideratum, and finding its successful cultivation possible, are content to raise it on such land as may be adapted to it and seek no further. But in this we think they are mistaken. It may be regarded as proven beyond a doubt that in the Eastern States even where the conditions are more favorable for corn, it is found to pay very well to raise roots, especially as an alternate crop. In this country, where our pasture is unreliable and not of a uniformly good quality, and where good corn land is at once scarce and dear, we are convinced that the cultivation of such crops would be sure to be of the highest advantage. They would supply at once a valuable and necessary variety, and a reliable green feed between grass times. It is true that roots require somewhat more labor to raise than either corn or alfalfa, but, apart from the desirability of an occasional change in the nature of feed, the yield is sufficiently larger to pay for extra pains. W. N. Gladden, of Russian River, a few years since, raised 30 tons of Mangle-wurzel to the acre, on light, sandy soil, and these sold readily at $4 50 per ton. And well they might, as this was a low price for them. Here, then, is a clean yield of $135 per acre. The stockmen who took them were delighted with the effect of the root on the cattle, would take all he could raise, and protested that they could not do without them. They were fed alternately with hay. Mr. Gladden is of the opinion that, with thorough cultivation and manuring, the Mangle-wurzel can be raised on land that would not grow a corn crop, and Emil Berlin informs us that in the vicinity of Santa Barbara he raised crops of 10 to 15 tons per acre on uplands by planting early. In England and some of the Eastern States, the Swedish turnip is found to yield more largely than the Mangle; with careful cultivation sometimes as high as 40 to 45 tons per acre. And wherever the Swede is used it is found to have the most excellent effect on the cattle, increasing their weight, quality and quantity of milk, as well as their general health and endurance. So large a crop fed on the ground on which it is produced cannot fail to return to the soil more than is taken off, and when followed by grass or grain crops these latter are enormous. In England this is found to be especially the case after feeding the roots to sheep. They generally allow about fifteen sheep to the acre. We are convinced that in this country we have scarcely begun to study the true economy of stock raising and feeding, and shall be happy if these few hints be found of any service in directing attention to what we conceive to be one of its most important branches.

A Romantic Story.

Reconciliation in Death—An incident of the Chattanooga Disaster.

The following facts concerning the death of John Hagline, second mate of the ill-fated brig Chattanooga, and who was drowned, together with Captain Frey and William Stephenson, a few days since in a gale off Cape Point, will doubtless be read with interest:

Some six years since Hagline's father, who is quite wealthy and who is the exclusive owner of Little Cove Point, married a third wife. This so enraged the son, who was by many years the senior of the bride, his father being nearly seventy years of age at the time, that he swore he would leave the old homestead never to return. This vow, it seems, he faithfully kept.

Having received a good education, he succeeded in finding lucrative employment in this city until the sudden death of his brother, Charles Hagline, who held the position of book-keeper for a large shipchandler firm on Fell's Point.

At this time John took a notion of leading the life of a sailor, and visited nearly all of the foreign ports, making his home when in Baltimore at the residence of police officer Daniel Phelan, on East Pratt street, with whose family he was a special favorite.

It will be remembered that the Chattanooga made her first start for Demerara Jan. 26th, and having grounded off Sandy Point was towed back to this city for repairs.

Hagline while ashore paid a flying visit to his home, and during conversation remarked that the brig was more heavily laden and was sitting lower in the water than he had ever seen her before, adding, "I am almost afraid to go in her. I think I will throw up the job, and, after my six years' absence, go down to see the old gentleman," (meaning his father.)

After visiting the brig for the purpose of saying "good-bye" to his companions, he was persuaded to make the trip.

As has already been published in these columns, the unfortunate man was washed ashore in front of his own home and at his father's feet.

The recognition was instantaneous, and the almost heart-broken father fell fainting over the body of his long lost son. It will be remembered that Hagline was the only eye-witness of the bark New Light tragedy about a year since, in which the mate, Marshall Fassenden, was stabbed and killed by George Collins, a seaman. Pending trial, Hagline remained in jail two months as a witness, and the life of Collins was saved by his testimony.—Baltimore Bulletin Feb. 4th.

Cleopatra's Needle is in London at last. While the cylinder ship was in port at Ferrol, a new mast was put in, new sails were bent, the ballast was carefully arranged, and all was made taut and trim. In appearance the strange craft resembled a huge Cornish boiler, with a small deck-house and a mast. Its length was 92 feet; its diameter 16 feet, and barely a third of it was above water. The Anglia, which has so successfully towed the obelisk to the East India docks, is the largest paddle-wheel tug in London, and has done a great deal of ocean towing. The cable used was a fifteen inch hawser, and the length usually allowed was 100 fathoms. Starting from the Bay of Biscay on January 15 the two ill-mated companions put to sea, with a fresh gale blowing and a heavy sea running, and at Gravesend on January 21, after an uneventful voyage. Here John Dixon and his wife went on board and congratulated the captains of the two vessels upon their safe arrival. Hardly had a start been made up the Thames when a boat was seen putting off from the shore and a waterman excitedly waved an envelope above his head. It was a telegram from the Queen to the successful engineer, announcing her gratification at hearing of the safe arrival of the Needle. The news having spread that the obelisk was coming up the river, crowds gathered at every wharf and pier to cheer and wave handkerchiefs, and at Blackwall Mr. Dixon was enthusiastically greeted. The monolith that was raised 3,300 years ago by Thothmes at Heliopolis was in an English berth.

For Nominating President.

The old method for nominating President and Vice President of the United States has met with merited censure. It seems that the growth of our relations and the more complex nature of our political life, are not satisfied by this primitive method, and there is a strong desire for modification among the people. Here is a plan which has been lately advanced, seemingly in the interest of labor and currency reform. We do not think that in its present form, perfection has been reached, but there are many good features about the plan.

The prevailing idea of this theory is very popular, viz.: To bring the election nearer to the people. It is proposed that each labor or currency reform organized in any State having 90 or more numbers may vote on a given day in 1878 for President and Vice President. Returns of their votes shall be interchanged, and in three or six months the process repeated, a national committee or association to canvass or protect the final results from all States. Early in the year 1879 again the process is to be repeated, confining the vote to the three most successful candidates at previous ballot. Then in the Summer take another informal vote between the two highest, and the most popular man shall be nominated. Then a national committee is to be named for the protection of this public expression and carrying on the campaign.

It is hoped that by this plan labor and currency reform would be sure of proper consideration in the choice of executive office, but the plan has many imperfections and will no doubt be greatly improved. Any measure which can make the people take direct interest and action in political affairs will result in good.

The Sacramento Bee says: It is now time for the schoolmarms to rise up in their wrath and rebel against the lords of creation. The Senate on Tuesday passed a bill which allows men to receive a third grade county certificate for teaching, which heretofore has been the monopoly of the fair sex. And it appears no more than right that they should still continue to enjoy such monopolization. Women are the natural teachers of youthful children and a woman's hand, brain and heart will do more to educate and train them than could be accomplished by a dozen men.

We are of the same opinion exactly, only more so. Woman is a competent teacher in any branch which she has studied, and it is at any rate very poor policy to encourage great able-bodied huskies, to complete for the work which needy women ought to have. We have seen great awkward, incompetent men essaying to understand the intellectual needs of little children, whose only recommendation for the place was unimpeachable laziness. Out with them say we; there is wood to be chopped and water to be carried, and if these great, hearty feeding, slab-sided inefficients can't earn a living without crowding and jostling the weaker vessels, send them to the hospitals and make nurses of them. Men talk a great deal about women's frailty and the situation which she occupies and then turn around and deprive her of every reasonable opportunity, to be honest and independent.

The end of the European war has been reached, as shown by the late restoration of the ordinary telegraphic routes between Constantinople and the outside world. We are anxious to inspect that new map of Southern Europe, because we believe that notwithstanding the genius and watchfulness of Derby, Bismarck and Andrassy, Gortchakoff, the Russian Prime Minister, has gained for Russia a diplomatic victory hardly second to that upon the battlefield. The Black Sea blockade has also been raised and many ships make their usual trips for grain. The Greek troops have withdrawn to their own territory, and the British fleet has passed the Dardanelles under the Porte's protest. The toils are closing around the doomed Empire and within, her fortresses are occupied by a well-armed and victorious foe, or threatened with the horrors of smallpox and other epidemics bred by the war. Surely Gortchakoff has an easy task.

Austin is to have a grand ball masque.

A Railroad to Plumas in the Future.

The present winter has passed away, so far, without the usual talk over some visionary project of a Railroad into or through our county, and it is just as well that it is so. Our railroad, however, is coming nearer every day, and we think that not more than five years will elapse before Plumas will be connected by rail with the silver districts of Nevada, and the outside world. It is just barely possible that some company, some combination of capital may conceive the idea that a rival road to the Central Pacific, would be a profitable investment, and if such should be the case the great natural advantages of the Feather River pass would go far towards making it the route that would be selected; but no definite calculation can be made as to this. It might happen anytime, and it may never occur. But there is a certainty that in a very few years, at most, the Comstock will be forced to draw its timber supplies from Plumas, and when that time arrives a railroad will be sure to come. The Virginia Enterprise of a recent date shows that the silver miners consider our forests a source of future supply, and also that it will be necessary to come for the timber before a great many more years.—Plumas National.

The Sacramento Bee has this to say of the recent floods:

This overflow may be the cause of opening new water-ways between the mountains and the sea. It has called public attention better than a thousand editorials could to the fact that it is time for county and district against district, like a house divided against itself, and unite so that all can battle the floods upon one scientific plan. The water will have its way. Floods cannot be prevented but their course may be controlled. There is no plan which at present looks so feasible as the opening of the proposed new water-way via the tule lands of Yolo and Solano to the Bay of San Francisco. This can carry off the surplus waters and save the levees on both sides of the Sacramento from Red Bluff to Collinsville.

The Assembly Committee, chosen to investigate this subject, consists of the House delegation from the counties of Colusa, Tehama, Yuba, Sutter, Solano, Contra Costa, San Joaquin, Yolo and Sacramento.

MAIL TROUBLES.—The mail which failed to arrive on Thursday of last week, did not appear until last Thursday. The stage men report a fearful "fight" with the "snow." It was almost an impossibility to get through at all, and Parker was hard at it. The best part of six days, getting through with his horses from Beckey to Buck's, a distance of only thirteen miles, and then he came in with his horses, having to leave his sleigh on the road. Those who have had no experience little know the difficulties encountered by the stage men in the high mountains during a storm. It is hoped that the road will be in better condition in a short time, and that the mails will come through with some degree of regularity.—Plumas National.

Silver was quoted yesterday at 23 per cent. discount. To-day it opened in New York and San Francisco at 4 per cent. discount. To-day, in all probability, the vote will be taken on Bland's Silver Bill. The cause of this sudden change in the silver market may be attributable to some information in reference to, or having a bearing on the vote now pending in the Senate.

Mining men say that the Suto tunnel could reach the Savage in fifteen days if so desired.—Gold Hill News.

Because we hear no mutterings of the titans are we to infer that Suto and the bonanza kings are not preparing for a protracted struggle? We hear reports of bonanza negotiations which are not altogether insignificant.

A collision on the Pittsburg, Hannibal and Fort Wayne Railroad, on the 13th, wrecked two engines and several freight cars, killed engineer P. F. Lugh and the fireman Hill, and seriously injured two others. No passengers were hurt.

The masons of London have recently tried the strike business and find that it is too expensive. They have resumed work and count the cost at £30,000.

The Land Mortgage Union of California, a San Francisco organization, has decided to go into liquidation.

The total rainfall for the season at Santa Cruz was 23.86 inches; at Marysville, 14.87; at San Diego, 7.03.

Louis Shaw and Lancel Perkins have made a billiard match for $500, to be played next week in Virginia City.

Russia's Prime Minister.

Prince Gortchakoff is one of the most agreeable men in Russia. Those who like him least acknowledge that, but few who have been brought much into contact with him have failed to like him as a man; and those who appreciate him best are the men who have served constantly under his orders. He was born in 1798, and has been Prime Minister of Russia since 1856. He is the richest man in Russia, the subject of highest rank in it, and ruler of the empire; nor could anything shake him from his post except a great national disaster, leading to a unanimous public outcry against the government. He is not a plunderer; he has not had to fritter away his prestige in public speeches, as the statesmen of constitutional countries are obliged to do; and he has kept so steadily to the policy of aggrandizing his country, that, if he failed, he would be pitied for having been ill-served by his instruments rather than condemned for his patriotic ambition. Prince Gortchakoff would not have prospered as the minister of a parliamentary State, for the gifts which made him supreme at the council table, in the drawing-rooms, and in the private colloquies with ambassadors would have been thrown away on popular assemblies. He has none of the bluff petulency of Bismarck, nor of the smirking readiness of retort which enabled Count Andrassy to manage the Austro-Hungarian Parliaments. He talks slowly, writes grandiloquently, and gives high-minded reasons for everything he advises or does. Persons who might have expected him to explain some tortuous piece of policy on cynical grounds are staggered by his semblance of perfect good faith and by the reassuring promises which he makes in a tone of stately gentleness, to which his venerable appearance gives the stamp of wisdom and truth. His strength is patience; his talent lies in seizing opportunities the moment they arrive; and these opportunities come through the simplicity of the foreigners who trust him.—Fall Mail Gazette.

He Must Die.

In the county jail at Reno sits a careworn man, in whose face the merest gleam of human intelligence is to be noted. He has just brains enough to save him from the imputation of idiocy, and just reason enough to rank him among sane men. It is J. W. Rover, convicted of the murder of Isaac N. Sharp, over three years ago, and sentenced to be hanged next Tuesday. The man has had four trials, and each one has resulted in a verdict of guilty. The Board of Pardons, to whom his last appeal was made, unanimously refused to commute his sentence, and that decision seals his fate. Rover must die, and with his death justice will be satisfied by the blood of a fresh victim to a barbarous statute, or, and it is a terrible reflection—an innocent man will be murdered in the name of the law.

There are thousands of persons in this State who are convinced that Rover is not guilty of the crime for which he is to suffer. That he has told contradictory stories during his trial is true; but he is a man of meagre intellectual powers, and no moral preceptions whatever, and such a man would naturally, with death staring him in the face, seek to strengthen his defenses by adding to the facts such evidences as his imagination could suggest. In this he has been detected, and it is this which will hang him. Had he told his story without elaboration, and clung to it constantly, no jury in Nevada would have convicted him on the testimony of a man like McWorthy. He is now to pay the penalty of his life for his false swearing. Let us hope that the sentence is a just one, and that it will not be discovered, when too late, that an innocent man has been judicially murdered, while the real murderer is alive and at liberty.—Gold Hill News.

DICK WINTERS IN DANGER.—On Thursday last a shooting affray occurred in the town of Greenville, which created some little excitement, but fortunately did not result in any thing serious. As near as we can gather from floating rumors, the circumstances were as follows: A barber in Greenville, named Winters, had made some remarks which were considered derogatory to the character of a daughter of Mr. Chappelow and the latter hearing of it, "went for" Winters with a revolver. Before he could be prevented he had fired two shots at him, one of which pierced his coat near the shoulder, and the other went through the seat of his trousers. Neither bullet struck deep enough to injure the assailed, and by the time he had fired the two shots mentioned, he had grappled with him and prevented further demonstrations. At last advice, peace prevailed.—Plumas National.

Three parties have been formed in the Sacred College concerning the election of the late Pope's successor, namely: The "Irreconcilables," led by Cardinal Manning; the "Advocates of Compromise," in favor of Cardinal Moretti, Archbishop of Ravenna; and the "Advocates of the Status Quo," the most numerous favoring Cardinal Di. Onassis, Archbishop of Vienna.

Flourish Hoffer, a San Francisco book keeper, committed suicide Wednesday by shooting himself in the head. Financial troubles.

At the Swamp Angel mine, Lowell Hill, Nevada county, a large quartz boulder was found last week, reported to be worth $5,000. The traditional homestead of John Chinaman crept out on this occasion. It was one of those natural and inveterate thieves who unearthed the treasure store which he immediately proceeded to break, and appropriate for shipment to China. His actions led to suspicion of something wrong, when an investigation disclosed a large piece on his person, and the balance secreted for convenient removal.—Dutch Flat Forum.
